

3Dsurvey Looks to Expand Its Partner Network

3Dsurvey, a Slovenia-based image processing software manufacturer, is looking to expand its partner network with companies who want to support its mission to help surveyors all over the world work smarter, faster and safer than ever before.

Established companies with their own distribution network, preferably dealing with land surveying equipment and software, may prove to be 3Dsurvey's ideal partner. Additionally, the company is open to discuss new opportunities with photogrammetry enthusiasts, either individuals or companies in construction, civil engineering, architecture, geology and planning.

Luka Pušnik, chief sales officer at 3Dsurvey: "When we say it's made by surveyors for surveyors, we're not joking. Our users love 3Dsurvey because it's tailor-made for them by people who have been in their shoes, on the field, in the mud and dirt, and who know exactly what a modern digital surveyor needs."

Companies that sign up as a 3Dsurvey partner get access to a partner account that's full of helpful resources, support materials and guidelines. Partners will receive all the updates on the latest features and software upgrades before anyone else. On top of this, they also have a dedicated partner manager to help to market and sell the software as efficiently as possible.
