

ESRI's Johnstown Office Expands and Relocates

The Johnstown (PA, USA) satellite office of ESRI continues to grow with its recent move into a larger building. The new offices are home to a team of 14 ESRI project managers and software developers who use current and emerging geospatial tools and technologies to work on a diverse range of challenging, defense-related projects. The larger building will give ESRI the ability to increase the team's size in the future and open a new training center for GIS software users.

The training center, scheduled to open in the second quarter of 2009, will offer introductory and advanced courses in how to use ESRI's ArcGIS software including ArcGIS Server. The availability of the new office will reduce the travel time and overall cost to attend training for many of our users and provide better access to ESRI instructor-led training

<https://www.gim-international.com/content/article/esri-s-johnstown-office-expands-and-relocates>
