

Web-mapping Demonstrator

British developer of geographic information systems (GIS) software, Cadcorp, has provided unrestricted access to a hosted demonstration version of its popular web-mapping application, Web Map Layers.

Prospective users in public and private sector organisations can now judge for themselves how well the application meets their particular requirements for spatial data sharing, by typing the URL of the demonstrator web site into their web browser.

Cadcorp has populated the demonstrator with a number of layers of background mapping including OS OpenData for the whole of England, Scotland and Wales, and OS MasterMap data for the major conurbations. Dummy business data is also included, to allow users to try out some of the web services which can be integrated with the application: notably 'Find my nearest', 'About this location', and 'Spatial Query'.
